

The School of Visual Communication offers a thirty-day summer field school centered in Edinburgh, Scotland. Participants earn fifteen hours of credit (graduate or undergraduate) in photography, visual communication and documentary photojournalism. This intense practical education program offers hands-on work in documentary photography, digital controls, the picture story and the tools of visual journalism. You gain the opportunity to work as a visual reporter in a study-abroad field school format. Supervised field work offers excellent training for photographers looking to improve their photo-essay, landscape and documentary skills. A 10:1 student-faculty ratio offers exceptional feedback and photographic critique blending academic education with practical photojournalism experience.

If there are any questions about this program, contact Lyntha Scott Eiler at (740) 592-1280 or Terry Eiler, Director of the School of Visual Communication, 301 Seigfred, Ohio University, Athens, Ohio 45701, (740)593-4895.
